

What are the strengths and weaknesses of the Electoral College? Part 2

Why are both small and large states often overlooked by the candidates during the campaigns?
Where do the candidates instead focus their resources? What impact can this have on turnout and party policy?
Would a national popular vote lead to a similarly narrow focus on America's largest cities?
Why might the current focus on swing states not be as problematic as critics suggest? Are swing states as fixed as critics suggest? Are they collectively quite representative?
How does the Electoral College impact third party candidates? Can third party candidates have influence even without winning?
What do Electoral College supporters believe are the main benefits of the two-party system?	